

(from Benjamin Franklin)

Our friend . . . and we . . . are invited to a party of pleasure which is to last forever. His chair was ready first, and he has gone before us. We could not all start conveniently together; and why should you and I be grieved at this, since we are soon to follow, and know where to find him?